Stuart Williams from Fiserv Selected as Vice Chairman of NACHA's Council for Electronic Billing and Payments

Brookfield, Wis., November 24, 2009 - Fiserv, Inc. (NASDAQ: FISV), the leading global provider of financial services technology solutions, announced today that Stuart Williams, vice president of Industry Relations for Fiserv, was elected Vice Chairman of NACHA's Council for Electronic Billing and Payments \(CEBP\). Formed in 1993, the CEBP promotes electronic consumer and business-to-business billing and payment programs and services, providing an open forum for education, resource development, research and the exchange of information about the electronic billing and payment industry.

"NACHA appreciates Stuart's dedication to the advancement of electronic payment and billing, and to the work of the CEBP which ensures that such solutions take advantage of the ACH Network, a safe, efficient, green and high-quality electronic payment system," said Janet O. Estep, President and Chief Executive Officer of NACHA. "Stuart's industry experience will bring great value to the CEBP in this leadership role."

Williams has been active in NACHA, the not-for-profit association that oversees the Automated Clearing House (ACH) Network, for more than 15 years and part of the CEBP since 2004. During his time with the CEBP Williams has served as a delegate for a number of task forces and work groups, including consumer tax payments, account portability, consumer e-Bill adoption and posting exceptions. In his new role as Vice Chairman of the CEBP, Williams will bring further insight to the council and steering committee to help shape the projects and work efforts of the council, and to design thoughtful agendas for its three meetings each year.

"At Fiserv we are proud that Stuart's deep industry knowledge and long-term commitment to NACHA is helping to drive the future of the industry," said Mark Sievewright, senior vice president of Strategic Marketing, Fiserv. "Fiserv is dedicated to driving the digital transformation of the financial services industry and Stuart's appointment to vice chair the CEBP is another example of how we are working across the industry to make this happen."

The CEBP, which serves as a voice of the industry, is made-up of organizations of various industries and backgrounds, including corporations, consumer service providers, financial institutions, government entities, payment networks and trade associations. Today the council consists of more than 105 organizations. Together, the CEBP conducts primary research, develops best practices and provides insight to drive the growth of the electronic billing and payments industry.

Williams has served in a variety of appointed leadership positions since becoming active in NACHA in 1994. These positions include the Electronic Check Council steering committee, the Check Conversion Education council, PayItGreen Alliance co-chair, the PAYMENTS Conference planning committee, the Payments Institute Board of Regents and the Government Relations Advisory Group.

About NACHA - The Electronic Payments Association

NACHA supports the growth of the ACH Network by managing its development, administration, and governance. The ACH Network facilitates global commerce by serving as a safe, efficient, ubiquitous, and high-quality electronic payment system. More than 15,000 depository financial institutions originated and received 18.2 billion ACH payments in 2008. NACHA represents nearly 11,000 financial institutions through 18 regional payments associations and direct membership. Through its industry councils and forums, NACHA brings together payments system stakeholder organizations to encourage the efficient utilization of the ACH Network and develop new ways to use the Network to benefit its diverse set of participants.
